The Library provides program and academic research support to college and university students, staff, and faculty.

Library features include wireless access throughout the building, seating for 500 patrons, over 130 public access work-stations with Internet access. Student spaces include a rotunda with soft seating and a fireplace, a silent study area, group study rooms, a Library Den for casual use and instructional labs.

The Library staff provides many services to campus faculty, staff, and students, including program-related instruction in information literacy, Inter-Library Loan (ILL) services, a Reserve Reading Service, remote access to the collection, and advice regarding copyright, plagiarism, and citation styles.
The Dixon-Alger Fireside Reading Room on the second floor houses current issues of periodicals and a paperback collection for leisure reading.

Back-issues of periodicals are located on the shelves to the west of the elevators. Most of the library’s periodical collection is accessible online in electronic format.

Three of the Group Study Rooms are located on this floor. Students may reserve these rooms online, by selecting the “Book a Group Study Room” option on the library website. Rooms may be reserved for a maximum of two hours, by two or more students.

The book stacks with call numbers from A-P are located on this floor.

And finally, a few reminders...

July 2011

Leave the library immediately via the stairwells if the fire alarm sounds.
Beverages in containers with lids are allowed in the library. Food is not allowed.
Cell phones may be used in enclosed stairwells, Group Study Rooms or the BMO Library Foyer.
The library would like to acknowledge the generous donations of the following donors:
