(iv) Professional Service

- Committee planning member: ACJS Conference – March, 2011.
- Consultant on Research Project: Separation/Divorce Sexual Assault: An Exploratory Study. A funded grant supported by the U. S. Department of Justice. Principal Investigator: Dr. Walter DeKeseredy, Ohio University, Athens, Ohio. (2003-04).
- Gender-Based Analysis: Human Resource and Women in Development in Colombo, Sri Lanka. (July 2001). Prepared for NORTAK Software Ltd. in conjunction with Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) guidelines for a joint venture project in Colombo, Sri Lanka. In July 2001, I traveled to Manila, Philippines, and Colombo, Sri Lanka, in order to research and write a gender-based analysis that was commissioned by the company, NORTAK Software Ltd., involved in establishing a factory site in Manila and an e-commerce site in Colombo. This report was prepared in conjunction with the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) guidelines that stipulate that all Canadian companies must consider women's and men's roles in any industry that will be established in foreign countries.
- Working with Dr. Nancy Mandell, I researched and co-wrote the report, "The Canadian Response to Domestic Violence," that we presented at conference seminars in Moscow and St. Petersburg, Russia, in October 1999, to community activists, academics, lawyers, and transition house workers at the Centres for Women, Family and Gender Studies located in both cities.
- As one of the Course Directors of the Bridging Program at York University, I taught a Bridging Program course at the Donwood Institute (an Addiction Centre) in Toronto in 1998. These courses, taught at York University since 1981, are designed to help mature students who have been out of the formal education system for a number of years to build critical thinking and analytical skills, oral presentations and writing skills, and to explore their potential for further study in either university or some other type of educational environment. From February to May 2001, I also taught this course through Carleton University in Ottawa, Ontario.

- From 1994 to 1997 I was the researcher/educator on the Women and Substance Abuse (WASA) Project in Moncton, New Brunswick, Canada, that enabled me to work with over 300 recovering women formerly addicted to alcohol and/or other drugs implementing programs for them in the community that helped to educate, empower and provide alternatives for them in their lives.
- As the New Brunswick Co-ordinator (1996 to 1997) at the Centre for Excellence for Women's Health located at Dalhousie University in Nova Scotia, Canada, I was part of the research, management and administrative team that helped to organize, set up and implement the Centre. I also presented the health concerns of New Brunswick women to the Centre.
- During the summers of the years 1987 to 1990, I was employed as a Researcher for the Native Indian Band Nations of New Brunswick, Canada, whereby I researched, wrote and presented reports for several Indian Band Nations in that province.
